

The Barnards are four generations of fruit growers. Ray and Emma began with cherries and apples in 1929. Jim began growing strawberries in 1961 and hasn't stopped since! He and his wife Crystal are now the largest producers of sweet cherries in Door County.

Daniel and Amy have a newly established planting and hope to one day have a much larger operation. While Susan has chosen a career outside of growing, she helps with production any chance she gets. The newest member of the family, Rodger, hasn't gotten the hang of picking yet, but he sure likes to eat apple sauce!

What can I expect?

When you buy a CSA season you will receive a ¾ bushel box (10-30 lbs) each week, which will be dropped off at your local drop-off site. Each box will contain a variety of seasonally appropriate fruits and vegetables and a newsletter containing recipes. While every family eats differently, we anticipate this box will easily provide produce for a family of four for a week. Because our focus is growing fruit, we will be contracting with other local growers to provide the vegetables for the CSA.

While we are not certified organic, we are in the process of becoming so. The process is time consuming and fairly expensive. We, and the vegetable growers, use a method called IPM (Integrated Pest Management). IPM focuses on the least toxic and least invasive method of treating and preventing crop damage. Most growers live on the farms they work, and they have a vested interest in using a minimum amount of management to protect their crops and homes.

What is a CSA?

Community Supported Agriculture (CSA) is a growing movement to connect consumers directly with growers. The result of this partnership benefits both parties. The buyer receives deliveries of fresh, locally grown produce at reasonable prices while the grower has a guaranteed market for their product.

Why eat locally?

There is no denying that we live in a global marketplace. However, by choosing to eat locally grown produce you are choosing to:

- Lesson your global impact
- Support small business & family farms
- Develop a relationship with the people who grow your food
- Keep your dollars in the local economy

The What If's?

- If you can't pick up your box one week, call and we don't deliver it or let a friend enjoy your box.
- If there is a crop failure we will do our best to find additional sources of quality produce.
- We are hoping to have a fall celebration at the farm. Keep an eye on our website for more information.
